The Jewish Connection Project

DE

Die heutige geopolitische Situation ändert sich ständig und gestaltet sich immer rascher neu. Polarisierung ist im internationalen politischen Diskurs allgegenwärtig. Im Eingedenken an an politische Aussagen und Ansichten aus dunkleren Tagen besteht eine große Dringlichkeit, sich diesen Ansichten nicht zu ergeben, und Identität als etwas zu betrachten, das uns verbindet und nicht trennt. Von der persönlichen Ambivalenz der Künstler_innen gegenüber ihrer jüdischen Identität bis zu ihrer Telhabe an einem Kollektiv: In ihrem Jewish Connection Project zeigen sie in aller Offenheit, woher sie kommen, ihre Quellen und schließlich, wer sie sind.

EN

Today's geopolitical situation is constantly and rapidly changing and reshaping itself. Polarization is omnipresent in the international political discourse. Reminiscent of political statements and views from darker days, there is a strong urge not to surrender to those views and to look at everyone's identity as something which connects rather than divides.

Starting from the artists' personal conflict and ambiguity towards being Jewish, tot he essence of who they are as a collective.

In The Jewish Connection Project, they show openly where they come from, what constitutes their roots, their first source, and they reach down to the core of who they are.

Zusammengehörigkeit

The matter of belonging in the process of the work

DE

Lisi Estaras und Ido Batash haben sich 2012 während der Arbeit an C(H)OEURS von Alain Platel kennengelernt. Sie entdeckten ihre starke Affinität zueinander, in ihren Ideen und in der Art und Weise, wie sie sich Bewegung und körperlichen Zuständen annähern. Gelegentlich wurden sie von den Kolleg_innen humorvoll „the Jewish connection“ genannt. Das brachte sie schließlich zu der Frage: besteht denn tatsächlich eine solche Verbindung? Und wenn ja, was ist der Grund für ihre Affinität?

Während der Proben entwickelten sie beide eine Vorliebe für heftige, wilde Bewegungen, die aus einer Folge von schnell abgebrochenen Impulsen bestehen, um jederzeit in eine andere Richtung auszubrechen: das ist die „Monkeymind“, nach der sich die Compagnie benannt hat. Ein endloses Geplauder im Kopf, wenn die Gedanken wie ein hyperaktiver Affe von einem Baum zu andern springen. Ihre Grundlagen sind instinktive Bewegungen und Gedankenströme.

Angst, Unbeholfenheit, Impulsivität, Verwirrung und Mehrdeutigkeit sind wiederkehrende Themen in ihrer Arbeit. High Energy als potentieller Auslöser für die verschiedenen Bewegungen, Zustände, Ausdrucksformen und Qualitäten, die sich zu einer einzigartigen Sprache verdichten: einer körperlichen Poesie. Der Körper selbst kommt zu Wort, als als Träger der emotionalen und physischen Geschichte seiner Vorfahren, der Identität und des Selbst. Es ist dieser Prozess, der sie erkennen lässt, wer sie sind.

Bei der Erarbeitung des Jewish Connection Project verspürten sie den Wunsch, ihre eigenen widersprüchlichen und mehrdeutigen Gefühle in Richtung ihrer jüdischen Identität zu hinterfragen. Um tiefer in diesen Prozess einzutauchen, versammelten sie eine Gruppe jüdischer Tänzer_innen aus Israel und von anderswo. Zugleich suchten sie nach einer Verbindung vor Ort: Wo leben Jüdinnen und Juden an den jeweiligen Orten, an denen sie performen? Wer sind Sie? Und sind sie möglicherweise dazu bereit, sich den Tänzer_innen auf der Bühne anzuschließen?

Was ist ‚Affinität‘? Es kann eine biologische Angelegenheit sein, eine chemische Anziehung, eine natürliche Zuneigung oder einfach eine subjektive Angelegenheit. Sie kann auftauchen und verschwinden oder sich in ihrer Intensität verändern. Sie kann tief sein oder oberflächlich. Oder wertend. Wir treffen Entscheidungen auf der Grundlage unserer Affinität zu anderen. Wir bilden Gruppen, um ein Gefühl der Zugehörigkeit zu entwickeln. Wir suchen nach einer individuellen und einer kollektiven Identität. Manchmal identifizieren wir uns mit jemandem, weil wir bestimmte Ansichten teilen. Wir können aber auch einen Glauben oder eine Religion teilen, eine Nationalität oder einen ethnischen Hintergrund. Wir nehmen eine Identität an, um uns einzufügen.

Und dann ist da noch die Frage, wie sehr man die eigene Identität schätzen sollte. Was ist Kollektivität wert, wenn sie auf Kosten anderer geht? Wird sie anderen verweigert? Wer gehört dazu? Und wer nicht? Und was sind die wahren Motive der Exklusion? Oder sind wir am Ende doch nur Kreaturen, die sich fortpflanzen wollen? Welche Formel wird gewinnen, die biologische oder die kulturelle? Dies sind einige von einer ganzen Reihe von Fragen, die während des Arbeitsprozesses aufgeworfen wurden, obwohl nicht alle gegebenen Antworten in die gleiche Richtung wiesen. Wie das Sprichwort sagt: „Zwei Juden, drei Meinungen“. Es muss etwas Wahres dran sein.

Während der Arbeit an C(H)OEURS, haben Lisi und Ido nicht nur einander kennengelernt, sondern auch die Musik von Wagner. Zu Wagner zu tanzen war eine verwirrende Erfahrung, zum Teil wahrscheinlich wegen seines offenen Antisemitismus, aber hauptsächlich wegen der Art, wie er später von der Nazi-Propaganda verwendet wurde. Das hat dazu geführt, dass Wagners Musik in Israel nicht gespielt werden kann. Erst letztes Jahr musste sich ein israelischer Radiosender entschuldigen, weil sie einen Auszug aus Gotterdämmerung gespielt haben. Lisi und Ido spielen mit diesem inoffiziellen Verbot. Sollte man den Mann von der Musik trennen?

EN

Lisi Estaras and Ido Batash met in 2012 during the creation of C(H)OEURS directed by Alain Platel. They found a strong sense of affinity in the material they created, their ideas and certain ways to approach movement and physical states. Occasionally while working in the studio together people would refer to them in a humorous way as ‘the Jewish connection’.

That brought them to the question: does such a connection exist? And if so, what is the cause of our affinity?

Lisi Estaras and Ido Batash first met in 2012 during the process of creating Alain Platel’s production C(H)OEURS. They soon sensed a close kinship in their approach to movement. They both have a penchant for agitated movements consisting of a succession of impulses that are each broken off so as to spring in a different direction, at a new tangent. This is the essence of the ‘monkey mind’ after which the company is named: it is the endless chattering in your head when you jump from one thought to the next as a fitful monkey does from tree to tree. Their foundations are instinctive movements and the stream of thoughts.

Anxiety, awkwardness, impulsiveness, confusion, and ambiguity are recurrent themes in the work. High energy as a possible trigger and the different movement/states/expressions qualities to arrive to a unique language of physical poetry. The body is allowed to talk by itself as it is the carrier of the emotional and physical history of the creators’ ancestors, identity and self. It is this process that may bring them to the core of who they are.

For the creation of The Jewish Connection Project, they felt a desire to question their own contradictory and ambiguous feelings towards their Jewish identity. To delve more deeply, they assembled a group of Jewish dancers from Israel and elsewhere. And they felt strengthened in their quest for a local connection: where are the Jews to be found in each of the places where the production is performed? Who are they? And are they prepared to join the dancers onstage?

What is ‘affinity’? It can be a biological thing or a chemical attraction or a natural ‘liking’ or a caprice, a subjective matter. It can also appear and disappear and change in its graduation. It can be deep or superficial. It can be judgmental. We make decisions based on our affinity for others. We make groups to feel that we belong. We search for an individual and a collective identity. Sometimes we identify with somebody because we share points of view. But we can also share a belief or religion or country or ethnic background. We assume an identity to try to fit in.

And then there is also the question of how deeply you should cherish an identity. What is collectivity worth if it is at other people’s expense? Or is denied to others? Who belongs and who does not? And what are the true motives for exclusion? Or are we in the end just creatures looking to procreate? And which formula will win, the biological or the cultural? These are some of a whole range of questions that were thrown up during the creative process, though they were not all given answers that pointed in the same direction. As the saying goes: ‘two Jews, three opinions’. There must be some truth in it.

While working on C(H)OEURS, Lisi and Ido not only met each other, but also became acquainted with the music of Wagner. Dancing to Wagner was a confusing experience, in part probably because of his open antisemitism, but mainly because of the way he was later used for Nazi propaganda. This has meant that Wagner’s music cannot be played in Israel. Only last year, an Israeli radio station had to apologise for playing an extract from Gotterdämmerung. Lisi and Ido make play of this unofficial ban. Should one separate the man from the music?

„We“ as an identity

*Ido Batash's point of experience:
What makes me a Jew and what does it means to be a Jew?*

The question above shows the fundamental struggle I had with the idea of being a Jew, since I was a little kid to today. Through my eyes, the core of human existence is always around two main ideas. The ongoing aim to discover ‘who are we?’ along the wish to understand ‘who am I?’. The idea of who we are as a collective define who we are as individuals. This happens because of a necessity and attachment to history, tradition, religion and the non-stop search for a collective identity. Putting aside the good things it can create and develop, from my personal point of view and life experience, this is also the source of segregation, ignorance, suffering and racism. As for my part in life, I wish to face and search for new alternatives and perceptions, to open up to where I come from, to my roots, to my first source, to truly mingle with the Jewish me, till I reach down to the core of who I am.

Lisi Estaras' point of experience:

The sense of being a descendant of the ancient Jewish people became a central component of my identity. Nothing could dissolve this historical, culturally constructed memories of belonging. A way of living, an ethnic group, a religion, a faith, the messianic people, family traditions, an excuse for excluding or including others, a heavy weight on your shoulders, genetics, something to hide or show depending on the context, something you don't see or you do, from the beginning when you meet someone, something you are sure about according to certain physical features (long/big nose, a beard, sparkles...), most of them find big success in business and attraction in the value of money, the people of the book, the lobby, the people who killed Jesus, a minority with powers etc.

IDO BATASH

Ido Batash (°1984, IL) is an independent choreographer and a professional dancer based in Belgium. Between 2002-2018, Batash danced and performed for several companies, including les ballets C de la B - in C/H/OEURS & Nicht Schlafen under the direction of the choreographer Alain Platel, Inbal Pinto & Avshalom Pollak dance Company, NDD-Galili Dance, Kibbutz Contemporary Dance Company and he participated in projects of the choreographers Idan Cohen, Talia Back, Roy Assaf and Meytal Blanaru. In 2009, Batash started to create his own independent choreographies. Several of them were performed in UK, Sweden, The Netherlands, Belgium, Hungary, Japan and Israel. In 2012, he was invited to become a resident choreographer at Random Collision (NL) - an organization that focuses on contemporary choreography and the development of talented young choreographers and stimulates the exchange between makers and public to expand the awareness of contemporary dance.

In 2014, the work Ego Trip, a collaboration with the choreographer Anna Reti, was nominated for the best work of the year by Rudolf Laban Institute. Same year, Batash received the 2nd prize for the choreography of Body-Magic, at the International Choreography Competition of Machol Shalem, in Jerusalem. Some of his works were supported by Random Collision, Moving Futures Festival, 'DEPARTS' program, Trafo House for Contemporary dance, CCNO - National Choreographic Centre of Orléans, MASH - Machol Shalem Dance House in Jerusalem, Suzanne Dellal Centre in Tel Aviv, Cultuurcentrum De Grote Post - Oostende, The ministry culture of Israel, Mifal Hapais (the Israel State Lottery) and others.

Early 2019, he created together with Lisi Estaras The Jewish Connection Project, a piece for five dancers and a soprano with extra's from the local Jewish community who share the stage with the dancers (première 14 & 15 February, Campo Ghent). He will also be the co-creator of SONICO – a duet with 5 tango musicians on stage (première March 2020).

Along his personal artistic activities, Ido initiates independent projects in collaboration with other choreographers, artists and scientists from different disciplines, and he teaches contemporary dance classes and workshops based on his working method MoveMental, at les ballets C de la B and other dance platforms and universities in Europe.

LISI ESTARAS

Lisi Estaras (°1971) begins to dance in Cordoba (Argentina). After trying to combine her studies in social work with professional dance training, she chooses dance. Thanks to a scholarship, she leaves Argentina at age of 19 to study at the Rubin Academy of Music and Dance in Jerusalem. Quite soon afterwards, she joins the ranks of the Batsheva Dance Company in Tel Aviv. After five years in Israel, Lisi moves to Europe and starts her career with les ballets C de la B in 1997. She creates and dances Iets op Bach, Wolf, VSPRS, Pitié!, C(H)ŒURS and Tauberbach by Alain Platel, Tempus Fugit by Sidi Larbi Cherkaoui, and Learning how to walk by Benny Claessens (NTGent). In the mean time, and under the umbrella of les ballets C de la B, she choreographed Patchagonia, Bolero, The Gaza Monologues, primero-erscht and Dans Dans, a coproduction with het KIP (Ghent). Through the years, she starts to make her own work, independently from les ballets: she creates and dances Bartime with Einat Tuchman (Campo), Cocina Erotica, No Wonder & Hillbrowfication with Constanza Macras (Schaubühne & Gorki Theater, Berlin), Leche (Passerelle) and A distancia (Teatro Real, Córdoba). Lisi makes choreographies for theatre productions and coaches other artists/companies. She worked on Hiob by Sandra Strunz (Theater Bonn & Staatstheater Mannheim), Das Brennende Haus by Emilio Garcia Wehbi and Maricel Alvarez (City Theater Bern), The speech for dancer Irene Russolillo (Festival Equilibrium, Rome) and recently Het Hamilton Complex by Lies Pauwels (HETPALEIS Antwerp), which also had a German edition in the Staatstheater Bochum.

In 2015, she creates and dances the solo La Esclava together with choreographer Ayelen Parolin (La Biennale de Charleroi, les Brigitines, Centre Wallonie-Bruxelles (Paris), Le Gymnase (Roubaix), Julidans (Amsterdam).

In 2016, she creates the performance Monkey Mind with three dancers with down syndrome for Platform K (in collaboration with les ballets C de la B. & Campo). This creation was significant for her later choreographic work as the dance material offered by the dancers with disabilities reinforced her artistic direction. The idea of the Monkey Mind, as it refers to "the endless chatter in your head as you jump in from one thought to another, like a monkey jumping from tree to tree". Using the change of thoughts and its translation into movements and words. For the research into her 'Monkey Mind' method, Lisi is granted a scholarship by the Flemish Government.

In 2018, she starts an artistic collaboration with Serge Aime Coulibaly, Sara Vanderieck and Mirko Banovic on the project When I See a Strawberry, I Think of a Tongue (Kaap & Grote Post, Oostende. Theater des Doms, Avignon). The artistic trajectory of this project continues in 2019, with residencies in Le Centquatre Paris, WP Zimmer Antwerp, Le Bamp Brussels and Le Gymnase Roubaix.

Also in 2018, she premiered two major productions, Hillbrowfication (Johannesburg) a collaboration with (non-)professional youngsters of Hillbrow and choreographer Constanza Macras/Dorky Park, Gorki Theater and Goethe Institute and Sapiens for the Ballet Contemporaneo Teatro San Martin (Buenos Aires, Argentina).

In Ghent, she co-creates with Alain Platel and Quan Bui Gnoc, Le Sacre du Printemps which brought more than 200 people dancing in the streets of Ghent for the Day of the dance 2018. Teatro Calderón of Valladolid (E) invited Lisi and Quan to do a remake in their city in 2019.

Early 2019, Lisi created The Jewish Connection Project in collaboration with Ido Batash, a piece for five dancers and a soprano with extra's from the local Jewish community who share the stage with the dancers (première 14 & 15 February, Campo Ghent). For the Day of the Dance 2019 in De Grote Post Oostende, she created with Darryl E. Woods Ze zullen ons niet temmen, a short collective choreography that will deliver a new interpretation of the Flemish anthem by singer-songwriter Wannes Cappelle. For the SEAD Salzburg Experimental Academy of Dance she created No Human No Cry for their young dance ensemble (April 2019).

After that, the new creation SONICO – a duet with five musicians on stage - is on the table (première March 2020). Lisi gives masterclasses and workshops in Belgium and abroad as part of the pedagogic platform of les ballets C de la B. In 2017, she has been awarded with a grant for research on the themes of kinesthetic, empathy and the mirror neurons in connection with her monkey mind choreographic research. In 2019, she received a grant to do research into the dance/movement related tendency within Art Brut.
